Comedy-Drama Bill for Elite Week-End

Intermingled with some funny situations which occurred at the time of the sinking of the "Athens" at the commencement of the present war, are the frantic struggles made by an American girl reporter in an attempt to pull a "scop" for her newspaper. This mixture of comedy and drama are truly splendidly performed by Claudette Colbert and Ray Milland, and to secure his release from an execution cell in a Franco-Spanish prison, the lady poses as his wife, and thereby hangs the tale.

Following the torpedoing of the "Athens" by a submarine Milland is pressed into service as a pilot of one of the rescue airplanes after he is returned to a haven on shore still unharmed, and on this note of self-sacrifice and service the film ends.

See this thrilling drama of the sea and the war on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week at the local play-house.

We urge everyone to get their orders in early, and to send copies of this book for Christmas presents, thus pleasing your friends and helping the Red Cross. This cook book is a WOW!

Mrs. N. S. Kenny Dies Following Long Illness

A long and painful illness which she had suffered with Christian fortitude for the past three years terminated in the death of Lottie M. Kenny, the beloved wife of Mr. N. S. Kenny, our town secretary-treasurer, on Sunday last at the family residence.

She was 66 years of age. The late Mrs. Kenny was born at Clarksonburg, Ontario, to Thomas and Elizabeth Idle, an old and respected family of that district, on August 17, 1875. On December 20th, 1897, she was married to Mr. Kenny and they came to the Wainwright district in 1907, where they homesteaded some three miles east of town.

A few years later they moved to town. Mr. Kenny being the first school teacher appointed in Wainwright, and during her early years here, the deceased lady was an ardent and earnest worker in church and lodge circles, and was among the first of Alberta ladies to hold the office of Grand Worthy Matron in the O.E.S. branch of Masonry.

Two sons, (Kenneth and Gordon) were born of this union, and both of these as well as her husband survive, in addition to four sisters and three brothers. Her parents both predeceased her.

THE FUNERAL

The funeral service was conducted at the home on Tuesday afternoon by Rev. Dr. Stevens (Pres.) church, with a large crowd in attendance; and these joined in singing the hymns "Lead Kindly Light," "Rock of Ages" and "Abide with Me."

In extending sympathies to the bereaved, the reverend speaker spoke from the letter of St. Paul to the Hebrews: "We have no abiding city here, but seek one to come," and exalted the reasons to be learned from such a life as had for so many years been lived for others.

The arrangements were in the hands of McLeod's pastors, the members of the Town Council acted as pall-bearers. Interment was made in the family plot in Wainwright cemetery.

Parents Requested to Assist on Hallowe'en

The cooperation of the parents is again requested to assist the police in maintaining Law and Order on Hallowe'en by warning their children against committing acts of wilful mischief, which is a serious breach of the criminal law.

Damage to private property, tampering with vehicles, and blocking lanes, public roads and highways is a dangerous practice and is liable to result in fatal injuries to persons. Complaints of this kind brought to the attention of the police will be immediately dealt with and the offenders prosecuted.

The assistance received by the parents on the previous Hallowe'en was greatly appreciated, so let's get together, and make this an even better Hallowe'en than the last. It is not the intention of the police to curtail any legitimate pleasure of children on Hallowe'en, but wilful damage will not be tolerated.

As this Empire is at war, and we are out to aid in every possible way to bring it to a successful conclusion for the Empire—parents are advised to warn their children, should they feel tempted to commit acts of mischief on Hallowe'en, to always bear in mind that they may be depriving someone from buying WAR WAVY STAMPS, as a result of damage to their property which would necessitate costly repairs. So we again appeal for your valued co-operation and support.

R.C.M. POLICE.

PUBLIC NOTICE

I.Q. Tests, Interviews, To Place Army Recruits In Most Efficient in New Canadian Army

"Re-Selection" Proceeds Overseas

OLD ARMY CUSTOM OF WRONG-MAN IN WRONG-PLACE, AND WASTE OF SPECIAL ABILITIES ENDED BY NEW CORPS OF PSYCHOLOGISTS AND VOCATIONAL EXPERTS. — DIRECTORATE HEADED BY COL. G. BROCK CHISHOLM, M.C., M.D., VETERAN OF LAST WAR, AND INTERNATIONALLY-FAMED NEUROLOGIST AND PSYCHOLOGIST.

By KIM BEATTIE

There is a military axiom which says, in effect, that the soldier believes in "the fitness of things" above all other men. He is depicted as firmly converted to the good sense of precision in speech, orders and action and in synchronized teamwork. He is supposed to respect neatness, good order and discipline and to shun confusion. In other words, efficiency is understood to be the salient attribute of the soldier's character and creed.

And it is! But in all older wars, and in every army since Joshua's camped before the walls of Jericho, the soldier has disclosed a peculiar fondness of forcing the proverbial square pegs into round holes. In former citizen-soldier armies the incongruity of the wrong man in the wrong post was found with startling regularity. The inefficiency of mis-casting recent civilians in their new military roles was so general and persistent that it was accepted as an uncontrollable evil. Even the type of brusque, heel-clicking officer, whose very clasp speech told of soldierly efficiency, became resigned to such grotesqueries as a blacksmith working as a mess orderly, while an ex-waiter from the Ritz assisted the farrier. He surrendered to the inevitable and accepted such situations as irritations sent to try him by some heartless god of war.

As late as the last war, for instance, a pastry cook would be detailed to build bridges while a hortler baked bread, a bookkeeper bossed the horse-lines and a navy acted as pay clerk. With cheerful carelessness a devoutly religious man would be made catechist orderly while the Chaplain was discovering that the regimental racial was his batman.

But such incongruities are to be seen no more. A new directorate at National Defence Headquarters, called the "Directorate of Personnel Selection," is designed to end the terrible waste of men of special abilities, and to install the right man in the right post in the new Canadian

Director of Personnel Selection

COL. G. BROCK CHISHOLM, M.C., M.D., Internationally known neurologist and psychologist, and a veteran of unusually long front-line service in the ranks and as an officer in the last war, will direct the new system of efficiently placing the right man in the right job in the modern, highly mechanized Canadian Army.

Army.

From now on, all Canadian recruits are to be placed where their talents and temperament fit them. If Col. G. Brock Chisholm, M.C., the Director, and his staff can achieve it, there will be few instances hereafter of an artist converted into a tank mechanic while a garageman tries to be a camouflager.

The new system means just what the title of Personnel Selection implies. Both officers and men will be placed in their role in the army by selection. A corps of examiners located across Canada at the intake point of all army recruits will try to determine by personal interviews and tests, whether the new officer would be best fitted in the artillery, or the signallers, or the engineers, whether the recruit would be most efficient in the infantry, the armoured ordnance or army service corps.

MEN IN RIGHT PLACE

In the gigantic and complex organization of the new, highly mechanized Canadian Army there is an efficient place somewhere for every Canadian regardless of his former occupation. Personnel Selection officers will help to put each man into it. It is industrial psychology on a grand scale.

There are more than 150 different types of specialist and tradesmen in the 1941-42 Canadian Army, and when a commander wants a powderman, a meteorologist, a mechanic, a dentist or an instrument mechanic he'll get them, either army or civil trained. The disturber, or the drunker or disobedient soldier will be handled more efficiently than by transferring him from unit to unit or job to job.

HELP THE MISFITS

For the new personnel corps is bringing with them into the army all features of their mental hygiene practice in civilian life, or of their doctrines and teachings if they were professors of psychology and allied subjects in Canadian universities. They will not only halt the misuse of talent and training in the army, they will attempt to straighten out every soldier with a long crime sheet. They will act in an advisory capacity to discover reasons for personal maladjustment, of problems of discipline, of emotional disturbances of the sullen, lazy or unreliable soldier.

The process of scientifically placing men in their best military roles is not new. The big industries have long been giving vocational guidance to prospective and new employees for years and have extracted great dividends and the German, Russian and American Armies have also adapted similar efficient methods of allotting men to their most fitting military jobs.

THE VALUE OF YOUR LOCAL NEWSPAPER IN LOCAL BUSINESS

The Wainwright Star plays an important part in local affairs. It employs wage-earners whose homes are in the town from which it secures business. These wage-earners pay taxes, support churches, make their contributions to local appeals, take part in community organizations, and spend most of their wages with local merchants. It is no idle boast that it has been the means of giving well-directed publicity to this town and district.

There is no business institution which gives so much free service as a local newspaper. Were a merchant asked to give the equivalent in goods that the newspaper gives in free service to all organizations, he would find it impossible to meet the demand.

When money is spent for printing or advertising with your local printing office, you are helping local printers to help you. You make it possible for them to serve you better. Out of Town printing salesmen take money out of the community—paying no taxes, buying nothing from local stores, getting all they can and not caring whether you sink or swim.

As merchants expect customers to be loyal to their own community in buying goods from them, so might merchants remember they, too, should follow the same ideals in regard to their local printing office.

IT'S GOOD BUSINESS FOR ALL OF US

Customer goodwill in this town and district can best be developed by their regular advertising in your local community newspaper. The money spent for advertising, and printed matter, goes back to local merchants in increased trade.

Your dollars do double duty when spent with your local newspaper—they help you directly and others indirectly.

World of Wheat

H. G. L. Strange,
Director, Research Department,
Searle Grain Company, Ltd.

As the analysis of the work of this last summer's "Crop Testing Plan" proceeds, most interesting information is being disclosed. It is found that over 600 farmers were growing a wheat variety that was certainly not the variety they thought they were producing, and which they intended to grow.

This situation often caused needless loss of income to the farmer. In some instances in the rust areas farmers thought they were growing rust resistant varieties, and actually they were growing Marquis or Red Bird, which are susceptible to rust. In other instances farmers who wished to grow an early variety were actually found to be growing quite a late maturing variety which, in some districts, had been caught by the heavy autumn rains and still remains unharvested.

Some of these farmers had paid good money for the seed which they used, and which the "Crop Testing Plan" analysis found was not of the variety it was represented to be.

All this means that farmers should be very careful about the seed they buy. Registered and Certified seed sealed in the sack can always be depended upon, for it is inspected rigorously both in the field and in the sack by the Canadian Seed Growers' Association and by the Dominion Government.

Following factors have tended to raise price: The International Wheat Conference at Washington is attempting to draft plans for post-war wheat reserves—Trade Reports indicate that the quality of Western Canada's crop has been lowered by prolonged rains—The U.S.A. and Argentina have arranged a new trade treaty—There is an acute shortage of wheat in Sweden, Italy, Greece and Rumania.

Following factors have tended to lower price: Britain's stocks of wheat have reached a state where it is no longer necessary to build up any more reserves—Unfavorable war news from Europe has caused declines in North American wheat prices—Record breaking supplies of wheat and corn are in temporary storage on farms in the U.S.A. and Canada.

EFFICIENT PLACING OF ARMY RECRUITS

selection grew out of deliberations by the National Research Council in the pre-war days when the present Canadian Corps Commander, Lieut.-Colonel

"Going Back"—2.
Two weeks ago I tried to show that the belief in some sort of mysterious process which led to "going back" or "running out" of crop varieties was ill-founded. So far as wheat and barley are concerned, I believe that the necessity for renewal of seed is due to volunteer, mechanical mixing and occasional natural crossing. The proposal to discountenance running all generations but the first of registered seed of self-fertilized crops is a recognition of this principle. So long as wheat and barley stocks will pass field and seed inspection, it is needless to worry about new seed.

Hybrid corn seed must be renewed each year because it owes its vigor to its immediate hybrid ancestry. If we were to produce hybrid seed of wheat and we could do so at a cost of about $100 per bushel, it would be more vigorous and productive than the standard varieties, and it would "go back" in succeeding generations just as hybrid corn does. There is nothing mysterious about this.

Cats may be different. It seems likely that false wild oats may increase to the point where renewal of seed is necessary. This might be called going back, running out, or anything you like.

Three important imports to England from Scotland are Scotchmen, whisky and seed potatoes. The Scotchmen drift in like rust spots, whisky flows in because it is welcomed, and potatoes are brought in because English potatoes "go back." This going back is due to the accumulation of disease necessitating the importation of disease-free seed. But, after all, potato tubers are not seed!

HELP CANADA'S SEAWARD DEFENCE

A. G. L. McNaughton, was its president. The first significant announcement was in October, 1939, however, when a paper was studied on "The Use of Psychology in Wartime." Associated with General McNaughton at that time, in warning that more careful selection of army personnel would be necessary for the scientific war we were entering, was the late Dr. Sir Frederick Banting, Prof. E. A. Bitt of the University of Toronto and members of the Research Council. Unfortunately, the imperative demands for speed in mobilization, coupled with a drastic shortage of staff officers, hampered inauguration of a selection organization until now.

The selection system of placing recruits following tests and personal interviews was first tried out on the Army Tank Brigade at Camp Borden more than a year ago, after Col. (now Brig.) F. P. Worthington volunteered the unit as a guinea pig. More than 10,000 men have since been classified.

STAFF EXAMPLES

The Personnel Selection Directorate is now ready to launch its work under full power. Colonel G. B. Chisholm, M.C., M.D., who heads it, is so peculiarly well fitted for the post that he is personally an example of what can be done in an army in efficiently placing officers according to their abilities and training. He is not only an internationally known neurologist and psychiatrist, but he had an exceptionally long service, both in the ranks and as a staff officer, with an infantry battalion in France in the last war. On his staff are Captain William Line, formerly Professor of Psychology in the University of Toronto; Lieut. J. D. Griffin, formerly medical director, Canadian National Committee for Mental Hygiene, now attached to the R.C.A.M.C.; Major James Howard, as administrative officer, a teacher with experience in psychological work and vocational guidance, and other members yet to be appointed.

There will be five Army Examiners, each in charge of selection procedures in a group of military districts. At each Basic Training Centre and District Depot will be one Assistant Army Examiner and under him will be N.C.O.s and stenographers. All members of the Directorate have had experience in some aspect of personnel work, in the field or in industrial psychology.

CANADIAN CORPS ALSO

A similar process of increasing efficiency by sensibly placing officers and men has been inaugurated in the Canadian Corps overseas. Its most enthusiastic superior is the Corps Commander, for there is no more scientific soldier in any army than Lieut.-Gen. McNaughton and none more alert to the fact that efficiency is many times more important in this war of speed, machines and mechanical engineers than in any previous military age.

In England, the new process of re-selection of army personnel is already in operation. In Canada, they will not touch either officers or men already in the army for the present but all recruits from now on will have their first interview in the process of locating them in their most fitting job and corps, within their first week in uniform. During the first two months of training in fundamentals of soldiering and the basic weapons of the modern warrior—which is taken by all men regardless of the corps or service to which they are ultimately designed—each recruit will be given a general classification test and interviewed in detail by the assistant Army Examiner.

DESIRES CONSIDERED

His documents and tests will designate his service—infantry, artillery, ordnance, etc. When the young soldier goes on to one of the advance training centres of his now allotted service, his most efficient job will be found for him.

If a man has designated a certain service for himself and is found to be better fitted for another, an attempt will be made to prove to him that the place of greatest usefulness to the Army is his logical destination. The soldier's personal preferences will be carefully considered and an every effort will be made to permit a man to join the unit he desires. Little fiction is expected. The function of the Directorate is to place the man in his most efficient service—not in a particular battalion or battery.

The actual questionnaires which will be utilized are secret, but all recruits will realize they are not expected to obtain 100 per cent correct answers. Even a man's hobbies, likes and dislikes, habits, temperament, and types of entertainment to which he is addicted will play a part in finding him his military job. His sense of responsibility, reaction to orders, and direction, his common sense, general knowledge and alertness will also be revealed to the examiners. In the Canadian Army's system of selection, the personal interview, and reports on the man's progress during training, will play major parts in determining his service and work.

"Personnel Selection" Staff Officers

THE NEW ARMY DIRECTORATE OF PERSONNEL SELECTION will have a large corps of psychologists and vocational advisers situated across Canada to place recruits in the service and arm where their background, training and temperament promises greatest efficiency. The above officers serve on the staff of Col. G. Brock Chisholm, M.C., M.D., the Director, at National Defence Headquarters.

OTHER ARMIES

The German Army has utilized the results of psychological research in greater degree than any other. By 1936 they were rebuilding their army for the present war. Four years later, German army psychologists examined every officer and all officer candidates. Today the aid of every psychologist in Germany has been enlisted and their army tests start when their prospective students are still in kindergarten. Pupils of tender age are ear-marked for their future army career.

The American Army pioneered such work in the last war, and are now using the personnel officer extensively. Their tests have already shown that today's U.S. Army averages some degrees higher in intelligence than in the last war. In their classifications to date, 13 per cent of their draftees achieve Grade 1, characterized as "very superior, officer material." The next 40 per cent are Grade 2, classified as "superior non-commissioned officer material." The following 2 per cent are Grade 3—"average"—with the next 13 per cent being "inferior" and the final 7 per cent of Grade 5 being listed as "very inferior, for observation, special assignment, or discharge."

HIGH CANADIAN RATING

That the Canadian Army also has a much higher "I.Q." rating than in the 1914-18 war no one disputes. It would have been impossible to swing the army into a new type of tactical training in the midst of war with the success that has been achieved since Dunkirk, unless the Canadian staff officer and instructor had excellent and intelligent material with which to work. It is no exaggeration to say that the present Canadian Army rates as high as any army engaged, or likely to be engaged.

The work of the Personnel Selection Directorate will help utilize that mass intelligence to best advantage, and will stop the wastage of trained specialists, and of men wrongly placed, which prevented all other armies from reaching peak efficiency. It is a work which may never receive its due reward, but it is one of those intangible influences which will surely do a tremendous deal toward fitting the Canadian Corps for victory in the battles of decision.

● We see them board the train after their last leave home . . . boys we've known since they were babies. We say "Good Luck . . . we're all pulling for you", as we bid them Good Bye. But are we? Are we "pulling" . . . all we can? What are we doing to help them? Are we giving them the things they need so badly . . . ships and tanks and guns and planes and ammunition? Are we giving them all they need? That's one thing we can do . . . we who stay at home . . . one thing we must do. We must provide the money so much needed to win the war . . . and one way to do that is to buy more War Savings Certificates.

The help of every Canadian is needed for Victory. In these days of war the thoughtless, selfish spender is a traitor to our war effort. A reduction in personal spending is now a vital necessity to relieve the pressure for goods, to enable more and more labour and materials to be diverted to winning the war. The all-out effort which Canada must make, demands this self-denial of each of us.

FARMERS...AS IMPORTANT AS ARMOURERS

It may not appear so dramatic to operate a dairy farm, to grow grain or raise bacon as to make planes and steel tanks, but the work of the farmer is just as essential to victory as the work of the armament maker.

Always interested in the development of agriculture and practical co-operation with farmers, the Bank of Montreal is especially desirous now of assisting our growers of foodstuffs.

Farmers are cordially invited to talk confidentially with our nearest branch manager respecting their credit needs.

OUR FOOD SUPPLY

Written Specially for C.W.N.A.
Newspapers by John Atkins, Farmer Journalist
No. 1—FREE FOOD PERIOD
ENDS

Every fourth mouthful of food eaten in Canadian towns and cities has been donated to those who ate it by the farmers who grew it, for almost twenty years.

Vast quantities of food, which should have gone to feed the people of Europe, had depressed prices, and enabled urban families to feed themselves at less than cost. This surplus food piled up in Canada and other food-producing countries because Hitler had decided that Europe must quit peaceful trading and prepare for war.

While urban Canadians were able to buy their food at less than cost, they were indifferent to what was happening rural Canadians. Although they should have realized that their own well-being and security depended upon a sound Canadian agriculture, they were quite content to let the farmers do all the worrying. Unfair conditions, against which urban people rebel and strike, made a gigantic wastepot of the agricultural industry.

During this prolonged agricultural depression all Canada suffered, but urban people suffered much less than farm people. For the ten years following 1930 the one-third of Canada's people who live on farms received less than one tenth of the total income of all Canadians. Farm people could not take proper care of themselves nor of their plant and equipment. When the war broke out the farmers as a class had not the health and strength nor the capital that they needed to carry on and produce all the food that we now require.

Now, the farm problem, our food supply problem, has caught up with Canadians and we must all face it.

Our surplus of food melted away as more and more food was required by Great Britain, by our army, by our forces, by our own people for harder work, and by the hungry in other lands. Our wheat surplus, which seemed to be a dead weight on our economy, is now a live source of comfort when we are being asked to go easy on the use of pork and cheese and other foods that Great Britain needs. All good Canadians will gladly change their diet for the sake of those who need these foods. It is a little more difficult to make ourselves see the necessity of paying more for our food to ensure the production of it.

After years of getting one-quarter of our food free it is hard to give up the idea that we can continue to live at the expense of the farmers. If we are fair and reasonable, as most of us are, we will see that we are insuring our own food supply by giving the food grower a square deal. If we refuse to see the wisdom and justice of paying farmers at least the cost of production, the average farmer will not be able to grow the food we need.

Canada's farmers have filled every British food quota since the war began. They might have produced enough to supply fully Canada's domestic needs as well if their advice had been taken in the first place. But that is another story. The simple hard fact that underlies our whole food supply is that farmers cannot grow food for less than it costs them to grow it.

Prices that will enable the average farm family to carry on, and enough help to grow the food, are the twin solutions of our food supply problem, our farm problem, for the duration of the war.

WORLD'S WEEK

Associate Editor of the "Edmonton Bulletin" and author of the daily column "From the News."

The thorny question of renewed Franco-German collaboration appears to have struck an early snag in Chief of State Marshal Henri Philippe Petain's refusal to agree to important new Nazi demands.

Vichy showed an inclination to pick up "collaboration" following German announced advances in Russia which made a deep impression on many of the easily convinced leaders of the new France. The Nazis took immediate advantage of the situation and said that Vichy must make a token move as evidence of good faith in future dealings.

All they asked was the removal of Gen. Weygand as commander of French north African forces and perhaps his appointment to some distant unrelated post.

The demands, foreshadowed for some time in Vichy, carried considerable concern there. Few doubt that it was but a forerunner of insistence on additional concessions although for the moment the Nazis are not asking further north African facilities, which Petain strongly opposed.

The disappearance of Gen. Weygand as an active leader would remove, aside from the Marshal himself, the last major uncertain factor in French reactions to German plans. The demand was presented to Admiral Darlan in Paris the middle of last week almost in the form of an ultimatum although it carried no specified time limit. In event of the refusal, the Nazis declared, they would reconsider the "armistice terms."

Aside from its strategic importance, the North African problem has another important aspect. Many feel that the question of Franco-American relations hinges on Vichy's course. Concessions would provoke a rupture with the United States—a condition the Nazis have been trying for months to achieve.

The fate of French North Africa is one of the most vital phases of the entire policy of collaboration. Vichy has resisted—formally, at any rate, but each new German set-back has been followed by altered demands, usually for French concessions, although on a reduced scale.

It may now be disclosed that on May 23 the collaborationists supported by Admiral Darlan reached an agreement with the Nazis for turning over the important naval base of Bizerta and holding out promises of a similar surrender of Casablanca in the near future.

In return, the French were offered certain relatively small concessions regarding the demarcation line and other internal relationships. The agreement was to have been implemented on July 15 but Marshal Petain refused to initial it, using as technical grounds the alleged Nazis' failure to honor the terms of the bargain. Admiral Darlan himself is reported to be chagrined by the German double-dealing and to be less trusting now of their promises.

The Dutch East Indies are ready to play an energetic part in opposing any new Japanese aggression that will be opposed by the United States, according to trustworthy information obtained on the spot by your correspondent.

Vice-Admiral Helfrich, commander of the Dutch naval forces, and Lt. Gen. H. Ter Poorten, acting army commander, are both confident that the Netherlands East Indies will prove to be a powerful stronghold in the American-British-Chinese-Dutch front, a front which they believe is strong enough to checkmate Japanese designs.

Both of these offensive-minded officers stress their intention of defending the Dutch Indies under any and all circumstances.

The Japanese armed forces in Indo-China number two divisions, or something over 30,000 men, supplemented by 50,000 more together with transport ships ready at Hainan Island.

Chinese sources insist that the Japanese, along the Indo-China railway from Lachau to Hanoi, are building shelters for several more divisions.

The steady advance of German armies in Russia intensified debate in the United States and Britain as to why the British do not attempt a new invasion of the continent as a means of relieving Russia of German pressure.

But official and private advisers strongly indicate that the British have thoroughly canvassed the possibilities and so seriously doubt their ability to make a successful invasion of Norway, France or Italy at this moment that they have no intention of making such an attempt.

In the opinion of American as well as British military experts the British do not have sufficient trained men and adequate material to stage a successful invasion in the west this autumn.

An unsuccessful attempt at invasion would have disastrous consequences for Great Britain itself and for the anti-Axis cause among the conquered peoples that it would be a foolish undertaking.

It is possible, of course, that Winston Churchill may find the clamor for a diversion so potent as to compel an attempt at invasion in the west despite its obvious risks but there were no such indications this week.

To this commentator it appears to be much more likely that the British will throw such military strength as they can into the Battle of the Caucasus in an attempt to keep the Germans out of the oil fields which are their primary objective in the present campaign.

Hitler can get the oil of the Caucasus and Iran, he will be in a position to wage war indefinitely and the chances of successful resistance by Great Britain and the United States will be drastically reduced.

The Germans calculate that they can rehabilitate the Caucasus oil fields to at least 50 per cent capacity within six months regardless of damage done by the Russians.

Without that, all Russian resistance would be but a shadow of its present strength. Stalin, the British and the United States thus have a common interest in fending off German attack; regardless of the cost.

A month ago the London correspondent of the Daily News revealed that the British had 800,000 men and a large quantity of war material in the middle east which suggested it might be designed for a determined Russo-British stand in the Caucasus. Recently the Cairo correspondent of the Daily News said Russian forces in the Caucasus would be backed by an army of 1,000,000 Indians headed by Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell plus a separate air force.

He reported that a steady stream of trucks and equipment is moving northward from the port of Basra.

The Iranian railway which was capable of hauling only about 160 tons a day apparently is being improved by means of British and American locomotives and rolling stock.

The British-Russian order to Afghanistan to expel German agents is reminiscent of the measures taken prior to British-Russian occupation of Iran and may be a prelude to the beginning of a second route for supplying the forces fighting in Russia.

The war obviously will go regardless of developments on the Moscow front. It may embrace a wider territory before long.

EDGERTON

Ernestine Wallis is 'learning the ropes' at the local Red & White Store, and will succeed Mrs. Norman Macdonald, who plans to leave in the very near future.

On Tuesday of last week, F. F. Mitchell and L. McLeay drove to Tisdale where they attended the Masonic Lodge. We understand that postmaster Mitchell—the driver—arrived home "with the milk" or to be precise, at 6:30 a.m. Car trouble is said to be the reason, and it would seem to be true, as the "Chevy" was abandoned, and had to be later brought home by the garage man.

Druggist L. Darby made a quick business trip to Edmonton Tuesday last, returning early on Thursday. It is interesting to note that Mr. and Mrs. Darby are still very glad to be living in this Village. Let's hope they will never have cause to change their views about us.

Chalmers Jackson was home on five days sick leave, returning to his unit at Calgary on Sunday evening last. His younger brother, Gordon, had hoped to return with him to enlist in the Air Force, but parents—and age—are momentary barriers. Tough luck, Red!

We noticed H. A. Kelly in town again last Friday, probably attending to a few more odd business transactions, or is it that he hates to leave us all?

Red Cross officers are looking quite pleased these days because more members are turning out to quilting bees, etc., and now that holidays are over for the lucky ones, there is no longer any excuse for putting off this all-important work. We have said it before, but it bears repeating—it is the very least we can do, to supply warm garments and bedding for those who are keeping our homes safe for us. So, let's get busy with all our spare time, because if we fail them, who else is there left? NOBODY!

Sympathy is extended to Mrs. Earl Hallett at this time, as it is learned that her father, John N. Taylor, is very seriously ill, and was taken to Wainwright hospital Saturday last.

We regret to report that Alfred Perkins passed away early last Saturday morning at his home in Chauvin. Until recently, Mr. Perkins was a well-known and highly esteemed resident of this district. He was in his 67th year, and has been in poor health for some months. His funeral took place at Chauvin on Sunday afternoon, October 28th, and many friends and acquaintances from this point attended the ceremony.

Sheepskin Flats

Little Doreen and Isabelle McLean spent a few days as the guests of little Gerlie Wilkinson.

The young people of the district attended the wedding dance on Friday last, of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Hutchingson, of Vanest.

Miss Audrey Henry of Paradise Valley spent a few days with her sister, Mrs. Alvin Johnson.

A dance will be held in the school on Friday, November 7th, for funds for the Xmas Tree.

Mr. and Mrs. P. Teeter visited last week with Mr. and Mrs. Mac Templeton.

HEATH

The wedding dance of Mr. and Mrs. Stan Murray took place on Friday night at Heath school. A large crowd attended.

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Davis moved to Edmonton last week to spend a few days with friends there.

Miss Edith McRoberts was a super guest at the home of Mrs. J. Bartlett on Thursday last.

Mrs. Rosie Meester and Mrs. Clinton Davis motored to Vermilion for Sunday.

Miss Elsie Ford spent the week end at her parents' home.

Mrs. Ed Potvin had as week end guests her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Connaughton, her two sisters from Edmonton, and her brother who is stationed at Calgary.

GREENSHIELDS

Miss Laura Carl journeyed to Edmonton where she has employment.

We regret that Mrs. E. Johnson is still in the hospital and wish her speedy recovery.

Quite a number from this district enjoyed the Murray-Ford wedding dance at Heath on Friday.

An enthusiastic meeting organized a War Service League last Wednesday evening. Be sure to attend the Whist drive on November 8th, sponsored by the League.

Mr. Lawrence Blason was a guest at the home of R. Chatter one day last week.

Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Tibury and Iris left for Melita, Manitoba, for an extended visit to relatives and friends.

Welcome home to Mrs. Baklund and baby daughter.

GILT EDGE

We wish all the happiness possible for Earl and Bettie (Mr. and Mrs. E. Plaxton) throughout their married life.

Glen Denoncourt has been helping Mr. J. Allison for a short while. How can you at still long enough to ride the binder Glen?

The motor grader has been doing some improving on our roads.

Donny Mallard of Battle Creek has been visiting Delmar Plaxton for a few days.

Delmar, Wayne and Donna Plaxton spent the week end with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Denoncourt visited Mrs. E. Monaghan on Sunday last.

A large number of colds are reported, but as yet it hasn't been real bad except for those who had to miss school.

Quite a few from this district attended the Shower and Wedding Dance at Vanest school on Friday, and from reports, everybody surely enjoyed themselves—and how.

WHITE CLOUD

(Too late for last week)

We understand that Andrew Blason will be our wood-sawyer this winter; having taken over Ross Myer's outfit.

Quite a number from this district attended the chicken supper and dance held at the Park and spent an enjoyable evening.

Elmer Babb assisted Vern Trefrey to lift and clean out his pump for the winter.

Mr. Lawrence Blason is home on leave, before continuing his duties at a training school in the East.

Mr. Lee Babb left for Ardmore on Monday morning, by car.

Mr. Alec Veggo and Betty Veggo visited Vermilion last week.

Mrs. George Babb and Clara left at the beginning of the week for points south—later Vancouver.

Our teacher is planning an entertainment toward our Christmas funds. As she is a stranger to this sort of thing, can't we all jump in and help her? Remember, it's for our kiddies!

"Mouse" Blason is out wood sawing and chopping. We wish you luck in your new venture.

Who says Mother Nature has forgotten us, isn't this weather gorgeous?

Lawrence Blason left Tuesday morning for the city.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McLean old-timers of the district, visited at the homes of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Reid and Mr. Charlie McLennan's. Their home is in Vancouver, B.C.

GERMAN HANDS RETURN

Instruments for a complete prison band have been got off by the Red Cross to Stalag XXA, although eight out of ten of the craftsmen who make them are now turning out aeroplane parts and munitions.

Further complete sets are going out to eight or nine of the larger prison camps in Germany to equip one band a week. Each set has 3 violins, 1 viola, 1 concert flute, 1 clarinet, oboe, bassoon, alto and tenor saxophones, 1 guitar, a trumpet, a trombone and a set of drums.

As in the last war, regimental bands are again being restored. In 1914 Kitchener shut down all Army bands, but they were brought back in 1918 to help recruiting and instrument makers found it impossible to supply the demand.

Again in the present war all regimental bands were shut down until six months ago when out they came once more. And again British makers of musical instruments are finding it most difficult to cope with the demand for more music.

A Short Short Story —

"PAID IN FULL"

BY LESLIE HAMILTON

It was July, 1939, in Hamburg, one of the largest cities in Germany on the eve of goose-stepping over Europe in the second act of the Great War drama.

The scene was a gaily bedecked pavilion overlooking the Little Alster, that pretty inland lake nestling in the heart of the famous seaport which has since been pounded to a pulp by Britain's indomitable R.A.F. Gazing pensively over the sunlit waters toward the Lombard bridge which separates the inner and outer Alster, a girl—both young and very beautiful—but definitely ill at ease, sighed with the loneliness which only those who have been a stranger in a strange land can feel while in the midst of hundreds of their fellow creatures.

Suddenly, the girl glanced toward a nearby table where a German airman was drinking a bottle of Rhine wine and eagerly scanning the headlines of a newspaper. The journal the man was reading—like an irresistible magnet whose power would not be denied—had already drawn her fascinated gaze in his direction on two or three occasions during the previous fifteen minutes, and although it was only a newspaper which intrigued her interest, it was as a friend calling in the wilderness to the young woman on the balcony, for it was the one and only London Times—a veritable breath of home to the lonely girl spending a few days' holiday in the heart of a foreign land.

Obviously, the man could read English. Perhaps he also spoke it fluently. He was also an officer—and would therefore be a gentleman—so it would be all right to obey that impulse which urged her to speak to him. It would be unconventional—yes, but the very air of her cosmopolitan surroundings was distinctly unconventional—so why not?

"Pardon me, Herr Lieutenant," she approached him. "I noticed you reading the Times, so I assumed you also speak English. Am I right?" "Your servant, Fraulein," the officer smiled in reply, rising and bowing from the waist with a flourish and clicking his heels together in that manifestation of surface Kultur, which is the stereotyped response of his kind in acknowledging an introduction or coming to attention in the presence of a superior.

"I hope you will forgive my intrusion," the girl returned his smile in answer to his advances, "but I simply had to converse with someone in my own language; you understand?" "You are lonely, my dear?" he queried, shrewdly appraising her trim figure with the experienced eye of a seasoned veteran of many a flirtatious campaign.

"Simply bored to death, I'm afraid." "Ach! But that is only because you lack a friend to show you the sights."

"I think you are probably quite right about that. Hamburg itself is a delightful city, but when one cannot speak the language, doesn't know anyone, and doesn't know where to go, it might just as well be dreadful—isn't that so?"

"How very fortunate you spoke to me, my dear. You are lonely and at a loose end, as you English so quaintly put it; while I, on the contrary, know where to go but haven't anyone to go with either; so it looks as if we're birds of a feather who should try and get together. Yes—No?"

"That would be simply splendid, if you're sure you wouldn't mind?" she thanked him, darting a glance of admiration at her companion's commanding and handsome appearance. And that's how the couple, who were total strangers to each other a short time before, came to leave for San Paul, that playground of Hamburg, where any variety of diversion may be found at any hour of the day or night providing only that one has the wherewithal to pay for it.

Several hours later, considerably after midnight in fact, another taxi drew in to the docks on the river where a tourist steamer lay waiting to pull out on the early morning tide. Stepping out of the cab and beckoning to a steward who was leaning over the side of the vessel, the resplendent officer of Hitler's air armada discreetly tipped the man before surrendering into his keeping the poor, deluded girl who had set out to enjoy the sights with a chance acquaintance.

"Ah! Wunderschön, my dear," the Hun leered into her face as she reeled into the arms of the obliging steward. "You have been most charming in your stupid little way. Perhaps I shall look you up in England when I visit your cold, misty eating country in the not too distant future. Good morning, Fraulein, and Bon Voyage!" "I hate you! You brutal swine!" the girl hissed into his arrogant countenance, allowing the steward to lead her up the gang-plank and shuddering at the shameful recollection of what had transpired in a den of San Paul during the earlier part of the evening...

A year passed away before the victim of the foregoing episode began to forget her forcible outrage by the callous Ober Lieutenant Manfred—the old country, Daley Sharpe was doing her bit as a member of the W.A.T.S., and in the daily round of duty was slowly but surely obliterating all memory of the harrowing experience she had so foolishly allowed herself to fall into. There was one thing she would never forget, however, and that was the lecherous face of her seducer as he had mockingly bid her farewell on the pier at Hamburg. If only that dastardly Hun would suffer for it... then she could dismiss the matter from her mind entirely and face the future with a calm confidence that justice had been done. But it was no use wishing for anything like that; the age of miracles was past—and nothing but a miracle would permit her to know whether he had already paid, or would ever pay, a compensating penalty for the grievous injury he had inflicted upon her person.

"Daisy! Daisy! Jump into your uniform—quick!" a comrade of the same company awoke her in the early hours of a morning in late September of 1940.

"What's up?" Daisy jumped out of her cot in the dormitory of C Platoon. "Is there another raid on?"

"No! But there's a big German bomber crashed in the woods near Oxford, and the troops are out looking for the crew who jumped in paratroopers before the smash."

"But we're not supposed to join in hunts for Nazi raiders," Daisy tried to hold her friend, who was chattering with suppressed excitement and vowing threats of dire vengeance while she dreamed. "They'll shoot us as quick as look at us."

"They will, if they see us first," the other girl retorted viciously, recalling the mess a previous raid had made of her home a short distance from the scene of the present crash. "But we know the country and they don't," she continued, "so if we're lucky and spot any of the blighters, we can put 'em from behind a hedge if they won't surrender."

"But we haven't any guns," Daisy argued, although she reached for her own skirt and tunic as her pal smirked. "Haven't we—by gum! That is where you're jolly well mistaken. I borrowed a couple from my brother

"Stay where you are!" Daisy commanded in harsh tones as she covered a scolding figure beneath a hedge, breathing a silent prayer of thankfulness as she did so for the first faint flush of dawn behind them.

"Blimey! It's a Roach!" her comrade gulped, grinning following Daisy's example and covering the Hun with her own gun.

"Don't shoot," the enemy airman pleaded. "I know when I'm caught."

"Step out into the light," Daisy ordered, striving to suppress a tumultuous beating of her heart as she recognized the voice.

Hints for the Household

Front Quarter of Lamb

Unknown or perhaps unnoticed, by many, the marketing of lamb has changed considerably in recent years, so that high quality lamb is now available in all four seasons. The supply is most abundant between September and January. Why not take advantage of the front quarters of lamb being featured by your neighborhood butcher at this time? Besides being economical, this cut is tender and tasty and presents many possibilities for a varied menu.

In the front quarter, averaging 6 to 8 pounds, are found the shoulder, the neck, the breast and shank. If you have a large family, the entire front can be boned and rolled by your butcher and the bones can be used for a steaming pot of Scotch Broth. If a smaller roast is all that is needed, the shoulder can be used for that purpose, while the breast, shank and neck can be used for Stews, casseroles or scallops.

The Consumer Section, Marketing Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture, suggests the following methods of roasting a rolled front or shoulder, as well as several ways of utilizing the cold meat that is often left.

Rolled Front of Lamb

Method 1: Rub roast with salt and pepper. Place in an uncovered roasting pan, fat side up. Do not remove "fell", it has been found not to affect the flavor of the meat and its presence lessens the cooking time of the roast. Place in a moderately low oven; preheated 300-350 degrees F. and maintain this temperature for the entire roasting. Allow 30-35 minutes to the pound. The roast should be turned several times to ensure even cooking.

Method 2: Follow the instructions of method 1, but place in an oven pre-heated to 450 degrees F. Sear at this temperature for 20 minutes, then cover the pan and reduce the temperature quickly by leaving the oven door open for a few minutes. Continue the cooking at 300 degrees until the roast is done. Allow about 35 minutes to the pound.

The amount of shrinkage in cooking was found to be approximately the same in both these methods.

Rolled Shoulder of Lamb, Stuffed

When the butcher rolls the shoulder of lamb, have him leave an opening into which you may stuff the dressing. Be sure to take home the bones from this rolled shoulder, too. They may be cooked in the pan with the roast until a nice brown color, then removed and put into the soup pot as a foundation for Scotch Broth.

Dressing

- 1 onion, minced.
- 2 or 3 stalks of celery, chopped
- 2 or 3 tablespoons fat, melted
- 2 cups stale bread crumbs (not finely ground)

Salt and pepper to taste

Savoury seasonings, or fresh mint sauce (with most of liquid drained off).

Combine all ingredients, stuff into shoulder of lamb. Follow above directions for roasting.

Scotch Broth

- Roast lamb bones
- 1 to 1 1/4 cups lamb gravy
- 1 1/2 quarts water
- 3 tablespoons pearl barley
- 1/2 cup finely chopped cabbage
- 1/2 cup finely chopped carrots
- 1/2 cup finely chopped onion
- 1/4 cup of chopped celery
- 1/4 to 1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce.

Salt and pepper and other seasonings to taste.

Combine the first three ingredients, cover and bring to boil. Reduce heat and allow to simmer gently for about half hour. Remove the bones and shake free of all barley. Now add the other vegetables, cover and simmer for another 1/2 to 1 hour. Add Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper to taste and other seasonings. (The amount of seasoning will depend on the amount already in the gravy).

Barbecued Lamb

Roast lamb can re-appear on the table in a new and appetizing form, if the cold roast is cut in thin slices, placed in a baking dish, covered with this delicious tangy sauce, and heated thoroughly in the oven.

Barbecued Sauce

- 3 tablespoons lamb dripping
- 1 small onion, chopped
- 1 1/2 tablespoons vinegar
- 1/2 tablespoons brown sugar
- 1 cup water
- 1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
- 1/4 teaspoon paprika
- 1/4 teaspoon dry mustard
- Dash cayenne
- 1/2 cup chili sauce, or
- 1/2 cup tomato catsup

Salt and pepper to taste

Brown chopped onion in hot fat. Add other ingredients and combine thoroughly.

Curried Lamb

- 2 tablespoons lamb dripping
- 1 onion, chopped
- 1 1/2 cups diced celery
- 8 cups cold, cooked lamb, cubed
- 1 cup left-over curry or brown sauce
- 1/2 teaspoon curry powder
- 1/2 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce

Salt and pepper to taste

Cook celery and onion in lamb dripping. Add cubed, cooked lamb, seasonings, and brown gravy, (or broth). Serve with macaroni or noodles.

Casserole of Lamb

- 2 cups cooked lamb, cubed
- 1 16-ounce can corn
- 1 pimiento, chopped (may be omitted)
- 3 tablespoons lamb dripping
- 3 tablespoons flour
- 1/2 cup milk
- 1/2 cup buttered bread crumbs

Salt and pepper

Melt lamb dripping, add flour. Stir in milk gradually until mixture thickens. Add corn, pimiento (if desired) and lamb. Season with salt and pepper. Put mixture in greased casserole. Cover with buttered crumbs. Bake in hot oven (400 degrees F.) until crumbs are browned. (A hot salt crust may be used in place of crumbs).

THERMOS FLASKS FOR TANK CORPS PENCILS

Special pencils used by the Tank Corps in Libya have to be kept in thermos flasks else the heat would melt them.

Chinagraph is their name: They are made of a soft, waxy substance and used for tracings on transparent material like glass or cellophane, and also for marking the silk of barrage balloons.

They are supplied to R.A.F. pilots at operational headquarters as well as to the Tank Corps and other Army Units and the war demand for them is so big that overseas orders are now refused, as the shortage of them had, with regret, to be returned from London a few weeks ago.

The war is eating up British pencils at a colossal pace. Apart from the Services and Government departments, they are essential to the making of aeroplanes, tanks, ships and munitions. Last year the British Government bought 14,400,000 of them; 130,381,368 more went to the rest of the country mostly to factories producing war requirements and 41,920,344 were shipped overseas. Placed end to end they would go almost round the Equator—30,620 miles and 244 yards all told.

The British pencil industry has therefore had to put itself on a war footing, reducing some 125 varieties to little over 20, for certain of which the demand has gone up 1,000 per cent since 1939.

key tones, surveying her prisoner with a look of venomous contempt. "You never thought we'd meet again, did you, Lieutenant Manfred? Especially under circumstances such as these!"

"Captain Manfred, my dear," the German corrected her. "Our 'Leader' has seen fit to reward me since our, er, little affair of just over a year ago."

"I'm afraid your 'leader,' as you call that butcher Hitler, is going to be a very future air vice-marshal," came the sarcastic retort, while the girl racked her brains for some means of evening the score against the man who had wronged her so brutally.

"Yes, I'm afraid I'm doomed to enjoy the hospitality of one of your so comfortable internment camps," the other laughed with a derisive chuckle.

"Lucy!" his captor whispered to the girl at her side: "Run over to your house—it's only a few hundred yards across the fields—and bring me a suit of your brother Dan's."

"Right-o, old girl! I'll be back in

GATEWAY TO MIDDLE EAST

The Turkish Government have given London engineers a contract, worth some 200,000 pounds, to reconstruct harbour works at Alexandretta, consisting of a jetty with screw-driven piles and cranes.

It is understood that a similar contract is pending for the port of Merzouk across the gulf, the base of a Turkish army corps. Both Alexandretta and Merzouk are connected by rail with Aleppo. The fact that they are so near this vital railway link between Turkey and Iraq, dominating North Persia and the Middle East, gives both ports considerable military importance, apart from their value at the moment for trade between Turkey and this country.

Alexandretta has 6,000 square metres of covered warehouses, but there are no quays or dry docks. The harbour is not protected by breakwaters, although it is sheltered and gives the safest anchorage all the year round in that part of the world. Ships anchored half a mile from the shore discharge their cargoes into lighters and other small craft for which there is a basin 80 feet long.

a jiffy," Lucy responded. "I don't know what the dickens you want it for, but it's all right with me," she muttered, departing on her errand for the garments requested.

"Haden't you better turn me over to the military authorities?" her captive demanded, wondering what the determined young woman with a gun pointed at his heart was going to do.

"Don't worry," she flashed him a Mona Lisa smile. "I'm going to, as soon as my pal gets back."

"Here they are, Daisy," Lucy reported a few minutes later, handing her comrade a sports suit of her brother's.

"Put these on, and make it snappy!" Daisy commanded the prisoner, while Lucy looked on in stunned surprise.

"Good work, Sergeant Sharpe," the officer in command of a British patrol praised Daisy for her capture a little later.

"Au Wiedersehen, my friend," the satisfied young woman threw at the Boche as he was marched away. "It is most unfortunate you were captured wearing civilian clothes—for that makes you a spy—and deals you a dring squad instead of the so comfortable internment camp you expected for the duration. It's my turn now to say 'Good Morning' and 'Bon Voyage,' my Captain. Our accounts will shortly be 'Paid in Full.' Cheerio!"

The End.

Mrs. Eleanor Roosevelt, wife of the president, is shown with Mayor Fiorello H. La Guardia of New York, national director of civilian defence, as she began work in her post as assistant director of civilian defence in Washington.

ADVERTISING...

(A MESSAGE TO LOCAL MERCHANTS)

It is difficult for us to conceive of any single force which wields so great an influence in our life as advertising... yet, how many people stop to consider what advertising really is.

Advertising is any means or method of communication of essential information as to where, when and how a commodity or service may be obtained... and WHY IT IS DESIRABLE.

Before people will buy, they must be 'sold.' They must make up their mind that they want the goods or service more than any other product their money will buy... more than they want to keep the money.

But how can a person find this magic formula of convincing prospects "WHY IT IS DESIRABLE"?

The answer lies in the product or service itself...

Why do people buy your product now?

How do they use it?

What does it do for them?

Where do they use it?

When do they use it?

How often do they use it?

Take a pencil and write down the answers to these questions. Study your answers and you'll have the basis on which to build your advertising message.

Then your next job is to tell them "Why it is desirable" from their point of view. Remember, they are interested in their own wants and needs—not in a lot of adjectives making beautiful claims. The public doesn't care how big your firm is or how old it is... they are interested in themselves, their health, their happiness, their family and their own beliefs.

Fix this thought in your mind: "WHY IT IS DESIRABLE FROM THEIR POINT OF VIEW" and you will achieve success in your advertising.

Your local newspaper has proven that it is the most desirable medium for many sales messages—what about yours?

The need is urgent—

WANTED
A GOOD RELIABLE man to supply customers with Rawleigh Products. Write Rawleigh's, Dept. WG-108-127-J, Winnipeg, Canada

Billy Fish who has been stationed "somewhere up the west coast" arrived last week to spend a furlough with his parents in town for a couple of weeks.

Mr. H. C. Link who was away to the coast on business returned home here last week end.

Following his sick spell with a real bad cold, Mr. Cliff Reynolds is now around again feeling much improved in health.

Mr. Colin Hannan managed a trip home to spend a day or so with his parents last week. He returned to Lethbridge on Sunday night.

We are glad to learn that Mr. O. R. Hannah, who is a patient at the hospital these days is progressing nicely now.

Mrs. W. Loudfoot, of Edmonton, journeyed to town last week end, accompanying her mother Mrs. C. Love home.

Radio-inspector Adams was in town last week for a few days tracing up those missing radio licenses. We understand that quite a few residents will have to see Magistrate Adam about this matter!

Mr. F. W. Fish who is holding down a job in the city spent last week end with his family here.

George Reynolds is to cry the sale at the Harry Clifton residence on Saturday next commencing at 2 p.m.

After having spent his furlough with his parents in town Norman Taylor, R.C.A.F., left on Thursday last for an eastern depot.

"Those who are aware of the ill-effects suffered in childhood through lack of adequate care will welcome this book as a contribution to the well-being of mother and child," says R. E. Woodhouse, M.D., Deputy Minister of the Department of Penitons and National Health, in a foreword to "The Canadian Mother and Child," written by Ernest Couture, M.D., Director of the Child and Maternal Hygiene Division and published by the Department, for free distribution.

It would be difficult to speak too highly in praise of the book referred to, either as regards its manner or its contents. Any young and inexperienced prospective mother would gain confidence and reassurance from its perusal, and the mother of a family may obtain from it much valuable information.

Throughout the work, the usual technical style of the medical writer is absent. Instead, facts, suggestions and advice are simply worded and presented in a chatty, informal manner which adds to their effectiveness.

The book, containing some 223 pages of reading matter, is divided into four main sections: Care of the Expectant Mother; The Baby's Arrival; Care of the Baby, and the Ideal Baby. Each is again divided into chapters completely covering the subject, while an exhaustive index makes reference easy. Charts, diagrams and photographic reproductions still further simplify the content.

Such topics as diet, exercise, clothing and general hygiene for the expectant mother are discussed in Part I. The need for pre-natal care being stressed.

Mrs. W. Lyle returned home this week after spending a few days as the guest of Mrs. R. Wright at Hardisty.

Miss Ruth Jones was a tripper to the city over the week end.

We learn that the former Clifton house on Main Street has been purchased by Mr. C. Forryan, who intends to move in within the next week. The house to be vacated by Mr. Forryan will be occupied by Mr. Roberts the new liquor vendor.

Mr. and Mrs. V. Ganderton visited with their parents in town last week. Vaughan has been transferred from McLeod to Dauphin, Man.

It should be noted by the Rosedale V.V.R.'s that their meetings have been set as follows: First Wednesday of each month at 7:30 p.m., and 3rd Wednesdays at 7:30 p.m.

We regret to learn that Miss Aileen Murray is suffering from a broken rib, and that owing to receiving a blow, Mr. Stan Murray has a very sore head. We wish them both speedy recovery.

OLD BOOKS LIVE AGAIN

British, is turning old books, no longer of value for their literary contents and once quite unuseable, into a novel export.

London book binders are ingeniously converting these old books into a range of library fittings, blotting pads, ink-stands, waste-paper baskets and books ends.

Old-world looking, many of them beautifully tooled in gold and bearing ornate armorial devices, these forgotten volumes, bound in their day by master craftsmen, are living again in the New World.

Ink-stands are made by hinging two volumes together. They can be left in the place of the ordinary inkstand on the desk where, closed they give an air of distinction. When the top book is raised a two-welled inkstand is shown below. The blotters are made from folio covers, mostly in Russian leather or pigskin, leathers now made beautiful by their patina. The waste-paper baskets are also folio, the covers of two volumes making the four sides. Book-ends are composed of three or more books fixed together.

The United States is buying these novelties in increasing quantities. One recent order from a single store was for $350 worth of book ink-stands.
